G E M S B O K - UPINGTON: Hier is nog een ander tafel met Afrikaanse mense, verder is hoor ek net Spaans.

Al 22 mans rondom my praat hard. Spanjaarde, vermoedelik, wat hier in ons dorp is om te werk aan die sonpaneelprojek.

Party van hulle het meisies wat plat in Afrikaans lag en vrygewig drukkes uitdeel.

Die meisies se skurwe opmerkings teenoor die kelnerinne laat die ander Afrikaanses vinnig opkyk na die twee nuwe aankomlinge.

Twee hoërskool-dogters, giggelend, gebruik en oordadig ingekleur beweeg hulle in 'n walm van spuitgoed.

Die kleinste enetjie het inlas-slierte wat onder die mussie uitsteek.

Hulle word nader gewink deur twee ouerige, lelike mans wat geen geheim van hul attenties maak nie.

Al kan hulle geen woord in Afrikaans of Engels praat nie, verstaan hulle mekaar.

Die meisies weet nie dat dit moeilikheid is wat hulle soek nie, maar as ek na die twee grillerige middeljarige mans kyk wat wag dat die laaste tweetjies klaar giggel en bestel om klaar te eet sodat hulle kan betaal en ry,

Ek Praat Prontuit

Deur Mérie Scheepers

Sondagmiddag op 'n restaurant se stoep weet ek watter soort moeilikheid.

Vir almal beteken dit nie moeilikheid nie.

Hoe kies mens tussen 'n sink-en-rietkaia en honger, skreeuende kleintjies en kwynende ou mense wat net wag op pensioendag?

Dronk, bakleiende bure aan die een kant van die skaal en die wonderlike voorreg van bestel en eet soveel jy wil, geld vir klere en rondrits in luukse voertuie aan die ander kant van die skaal?

As die wêreld nie bewus geraak het van sonkrag en die groot behoefte nie, sou hierdie meisies maar dieselfde gedoen het, net op veel kleiner skaal. Soms sou hul beloning net 'n middag weg van die huis en 'n botteltjie koel drank gewees het.

Voor my oë sien ek die begin van 'n nuwe nasie, 'n nuwe mengsel van noord en suid.

Die ander soort Spanjaarde sit effens weg van die rumoeriges en in plaas van bier, drink hulle wyn uit langsteelglase.

Paartjies praat sagter met mekaar maan die kleuters in hul eie taal.

Hierdie is nie net vir hulle 'n nuwe geleentheid nie – dit is 'n nuwe wêreld vir ons almal.
