

Photo 1: Southwest-facing view towards Hartenbos Heights from the R102.

Photo 2: Main access onto the property from Geelhout Street.

Photo 3: North-facing view from above access showing landscape looking across Hartenbos River valley and N2 in far background.

Photo 4: Southwest-facing view of the property as seen from the narrow gravel access road.

Photo 5: Northwest-facing view along gravel track showing municipal reservoir in distance.

Photo 6: North-facing view from with perimeter fencing to the municipal reservoir.

Photo 7: Northeast-facing view from the reservoir looking across Hartenbos River valley, existing development.

Photo 8: South-facing view from highest point on the property – vegetation recovered after 2010 veld fire.

Photo 9: Southeast-facing views across property towards the coastline showing Mossel Bay town centre in distant background.

Photo 10: Northeast-facing view towards Hartenbos River. Area in foreground designated as being of archaeological sensitivity (waypoint 34)

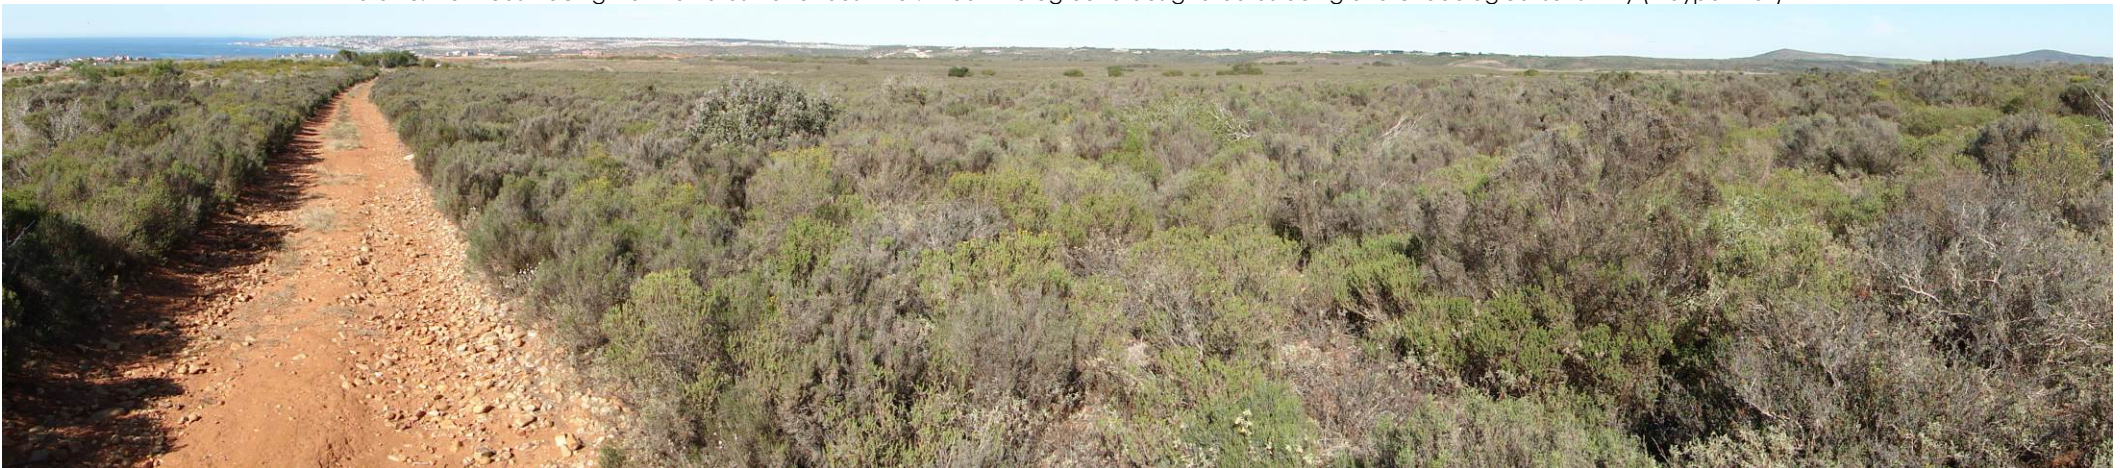

Photo 11: Southeast-facing view along vehicle track, roughly centre of the property.

Photo 12: Southeast-facing view along vehicle track, within close proximity of area designated as being of archaeological sensitivity (waypoint 127).

Photo 13: Southeast-facing view across property showing natural valleys.

Photo 14: South-facing view towards the coastline – southern portion of the property.

Photo 15: South-facing view with Aalwyndal smallholding area in the background (left).

Photo 16: Southeast property boundary – existing residential estate under construction.

Photo 17: South-facing view showing existing residential estates already developed along the Aalwyndal smallholding area.